

Some uncommon places to have sex in public!

Even though you are aware of the risks, your exhibitionist side still desires to engage in public sexual activity. Fortunately, there are a few locations where having sex in public is genuinely permitted as well as some of the more common unsafe locations. Find out some of the best places to have sex in public.

A Park

Due to other tourists and probable law enforcement, a park can be a risky location for outdoor sex, yet this risk may increase the intensity of the encounter. Find a location where you can park, sit, or lie down away from the camera.

The Laundry Room

While you wait for the dryer to buzz, what else are you going to do? Even though most laundrettes have cameras, if no one else is using the facility or looking, you might be able to sneak away to the restroom.

Instead, do you have a washing room in your building? If there isn't a camera, it might be a good area to fuck! To increase clitoral stimulation, try utilising the washing machine sex position. It can be considered the best places to have sex in public.

Beautiful Balcony the places to have sex in public:

A balcony that is attached to your house or hotel room is a rather unsafe area to have sex, but curtains or shades can give seclusion, and you can purposefully position yourself behind plants or railing as well.

Reading Room

Being required to be quiet while having sex can create priceless memories. If you prefer kinkier forms of sex, you might hold your hand over your partner's mouth or even slip in a ball gag. Avoid the librarian and find a quiet area.

a changing area/gym shower

Without a doubt, locker rooms can be filthy, stinky, and damp. However, they also place you in close proximity to those who are dressed differently. Additionally, they only make sense if you and another gym user have attracted each other's attention (especially if you are gay and share a locker room).

Its Pool

You virtually beg to make love outside when the sun is beaming overhead and the water is touching your skin. Because of this, a pool is still among the most popular venues to hook up, even if it isn't private.

For some great advice, see our guide to having sex in a pool.

a public lavatory

You can't have sex in a public restroom, and you won't be able to fool anyone when you and your partner come out with messy hair and undressed clothes. But for open sex, bathrooms are frequently the only place to go.

The finest bathrooms to use to make sure you have enough time to get sexy with each other are single-stall ones with locking doors.

The rear/storage area

Many people have engaged in sexual activity at work despite the potential for job loss. And because it's not used often, the back room is a favourite spot (we've even heard of people having sex in a kitchen's walk-in freezer!). You can also remain anonymous from coworkers and your manager by hiding in a room filled with filing cabinets, servers, or boxes.

The Seaside

The beach can be a wonderful area to hook up during the day, just like the pool, especially if it has a covered chair or bed, restrooms, or rentable cabanas. Don't forget to use sunscreen and protection!

A Cabinet

A coat or utility closet in a public building is quite seductive, whereas your personal bedroom closet might not be. Use any available shelf to position yourself for sex and sneak in when no one is looking.

A photo booth, no. 11

The only privacy these photo booths appear to provide is provided by their thin curtains. However, if you are already aroused (learn how to get horny fast) and can do the act while sitting or straddling, you may be able to do it before the pictures are printed. Away from prying eyes, hide those mementos of your time spent in the booth.

ahead of a window

Despite some people's objections, we believe that if the window is open and can be seen by neighbours or bystanders, it counts as a public area to engage in sexual activity. Obviously, you may get a little bit more privacy by drawing some sheer curtains or dimming the lights.

A campground

Camping might be the ideal fusion of the outdoors with permissible public sex. When you camp with your spouse, having sex in the woods is practically expected, and as long as you're quiet (store the industrial-strength vibrator for another time) and clean up after yourself, no one will object.